FMDH Foundation Awards $30,000 In Scholarships To 15 Aspiring Medical Professionals

FMDH Foundation Coordinator Taylor Hohlen / For the Courier

The FMDH Foundation is delighted to announce the recipients of the 2024 medical field scholarships. Since its inception in 1990, following the first family memorial gift by Frank Heckner in 1989, the FMDH Foundation scholarship program has been dedicated to supporting local medical students. Thanks to the generosity of our community, we now proudly offer a total of 10 named scholarships, each established through donations of $10,000 or more. These scholarships not only honor the legacies of loved ones but also contribute to the future of healthcare in our community.

This year, we are thrilled to award 15 scholarships, totaling $30,000, to the following deserving students:

Frank Heckner Scholarship was established Oct. 19, 1989. Mr. Heckner was a bachelor who farmed in Richland, Mont. He was a great supporter of Frances Mahon Deaconess Hospital and the Foundation. The awardees are:

Chaykota Christensen Osksa graduated from Hinsdale High School in 2019 and is enrolled at Minot State University to obtain a degree in Speech Language Pathology. She plans to graduate in May 2026. She recently graduated with an undergraduate degree in Early Childhood Development from Montana State University. Chaykota's goal is to become highly knowledgeable in Speech Language Pathology so she can have a positive impact on the lives of her future patients.

you'd like to pay the card off each month without incurring any interest. You also should take a close look at a card's other features. Are you getting a competitive amount of mileage points? How much is your annual fee? Do you have a generous "cash back" program? Do you have access to "extras," such as airport lounges?

- Home equity loans and home equity lines of credit – As the names suggest, a home equity loan or line of credit lets you tap into the equity you've built up in your home, which can be considerable, especially if you've owned your home for a long time. A home equity loan provides you with a lump sum, which you will repay over a set term with a fixed interest rate. A home equity line of credit usually carries a variable rate, although you might find a lender offering a fixed-rate option. You can generally draw on your loan or line of credit for any purpose, but keep in mind that unless you're using the funds for home improvements or additions, your interest payments are generally not tax deductible.

- Securities-based lending – Just as a home equity line of credit lets you borrow against the equity in your home, a securities-based loan, such as a margin loan, lets you borrow against the value of your investments, including stocks, exchange traded funds and mutual funds. Some people take out margin loans to purchase more investments, but you can use the money for any purpose. The margin loan process is usually not complex and when you make repayments, you're paying yourself back. However, you should approach a margin loan with caution because if you borrow too much, the value of your margin account may fall below the maintenance requirement – the minimum dollar amount you must keep in your margin account after you've started taking money out. When this happens, your brokerage institution may issue a maintenance call that requires you to either deposit more money or marginable securities or sell some of the investments in your account.

Ultimately, when weighing your borrowing and credit options, you'll want to evaluate several factors: the interest rate you'll be paying, the purpose for taking on the debt, your ability to repay it without impinging on your cash flow, and so on. With careful thought and planning, and, if needed, help from a financial professional, you can make your debt work for you – and not the other way around.
